(2) Reasons for Discrepancies

During the consolidated six months ended September 30, 2014, despite net sales being lower than the previous forecast mainly due to a decrease in cement sales volumes, operating profit was higher than the previous forecast thanks to a steady progress in demand, mainly for the automobile-related products, etc. In addition, both ordinary income and net income surpassed the previous forecast. This was due to partly front-loaded dividends income which was expected to be recorded in the second half of the fiscal year, and increased equity in earnings of affiliates, etc.

Given the uncertainty over the nuclear energy-related business and other reasons, we do not change our consolidated earnings forecasts for the full-year period ending March 31, 2015 from the previous forecast.
